Williams Foundation Helps Fund Tulsa Materials Camp

In May 2007, The Williams Foundation awarded a $10,000 grant to the NACE Foundation to support a Materials Camp for Teachers in Tulsa, Oklahoma. Williams, through its subsidiaries, primarily finds, produces, gathers, processes, and transports natural gas.

hours of hands-on laboratory experiences and classroom instruction to create awareness and encourage the use of more materials and basic engineering activities in the classroom. The ultimate goal of the camps is to engage and expose as many high school students as possible to the idea of a career in applied science and/or engineering.

The NACE Foundation is grateful to Williams and its dedicated employees for recognizing its responsibility to the communities it serves and acting as a good neighbor through support of community activities. (—Heather Lowry) MP

The financial support, along with a $10,000 gift from the NACE International Tulsa Section, funded the week-long camp for local teachers in the Tulsa Public School System, July 16 to 20, 2007.

Approximately 30 local high school math, science, chemistry, and technology teachers attended the camp, free of charge, at McLain High School for Science and Technology. The educators were provided with more than 40
